

THE GAZETTE.

MONDAY, FEBRUARY 1.

An article is going the rounds of the press in which the statement is made that Anna Dickinson, the once brilliant and popular lecturer, is suffering from poverty and neglect. Mrs. Dickinson is certainly no longer young, and it is not probable that she will be able to emerge from its shadow, and in her old age, which is rapidly approaching, she will feel in their keenest efforts the sorrows and pangs which the poor suffer, when the weight of years has rendered them helpless and their lot one of destitution. It is melancholy to reflect that the radiant creature who five and twenty years ago was the prime of a robust usefulness, with a fame for oratory not surpassed by that of Charles Sumner or Henry Ward Beecher, whose audience were composed of the best, most intelligent and most humane people of the country, and whose career was a continued triumph, should have fallen into unpopularity, and been abandoned to poverty and neglect. The sale will last 15 days. If you want bargains come and see us.

The foregoing paragraph makes Miss Dickinson in a worse condition than she really is. She is still in the prime of womanhood, being only a little past forty, three, having been born on the 28th of October, 1842. Neither is she suffering from poverty and neglect, for she owns a comfortable home in Philadelphia, and has not entirely exhausted the funds she collected when her lectures yielded her from $25,000 to $40,000 a year. But still Miss Dickinson is on the decline both in reputation and purse, but the punch of poverty has not yet come to her.

Between the lines of Anna Dickinson's biography can be read some things that are as unfortunate and disappointing. At one time she was the most powerful and popular female orator in this country. Her eloquence gave her a reputation broader than the continent and a fame that was hoped would endure. Greater honor was paid to her than to any other American woman. At the request of the president of the United States and senators and representatives, she delivered an oration in the hall of the house of representatives on the 16th of January, 1864. She was then but 22 years old. A more magnificent audience had never been seen in Washington, and has never been seen since. In that remarkable presence were the president, vice president, senators and representatives, judges of the supreme court, foreign ministers, and the wealth and fashion of the capital. Coming from a woman so young it was a powerful address. It electrified the country and strengthened the arm of the government. During the war, in camp and hospital, she spoke words of tenderness to the sick and dying, uttered the highest thought in American politics in the crisis of our history. Then followed her remarkable career as a lecturer. She commanded all the way from $100 to $250 a lecture, and had more calls than she could respond to. In 1875 her little fortune was estimated to reach over $200,000.

The evil day in Anna Dickinson's life was when she abandoned the platform for the stage. It was worse still when she assumed the task of impersonating Hamlet in a manner that mocked the Prince of Denmark and which only well belittled the woman in earnest. She attacked herself to a band of dramatic strollers who had neither ability nor character, and no wonder she failed. Her former reputation could not sustain her and she went down to humiliating defeat. Miss Dickinson spent thousands of dollars in trying to make people believe that she was an actress of merit, but it was money thrown away, for the people could not be deceived.

If Anna Dickinson has not abandoned herself to hopelessness, she can rise again, recover her reputation and regain her fortune. But she seems to have lost all heart, and will probably not again become prominently identified with the platform. Her womanhood, which began with so much hope and brightness, threatens to close in disappointment and sadness.

A correspondent, who is a silver man, that is an extremist, and who does not seem to understand what he is writing about, says the Gazette is in error in stating that only a little over eight millions of silver dollars were coined in this country from 1793 to 1877 both inclusive. A good many people are surprised to know that the government is now coining as many silver dollars in four months as it did during the period of 81 years after the opening of the United States mint. The official record shows that during the first two years after coinage began there were 204,791 silver dollars coined. From 1805 to 1838 there were but 1,000 coined and that was in 1836. Coinage then went on at a moderate rate only until 1873 when the coinage of the silver dollar was suspended, so that from 1793 to 1877, there was but 8,045,838 silver dollars coined in the United States. During that period, there were a little over 200,000,000 in silver coined, but 119,000,000 were in half dollars, 35,000,000 in quarters, 16,000,000 in dimes and the balance in half-dimes and three-cent pieces.

Our correspondent also seems to think that silver has been the principal coinage of the mint since the Bland dollar law went into effect in 1876. In this he is likewise mistaken. There has hardly been a year since the mint was established when there was not more gold coined than silver. This is not arguing in favor of gold, neither is it a disparagement to silver; it is simply a statement of facts. The mint has coined as high as $89,000,000 of gold in a single year, and last year the coinage reached nearly $200,000,000 and in 1884 it was $28,000,000. The total coinage of the mint from 1793 to 1885 inclusive, was $1,341,669,726, of which $1,369,981,008 was gold.

The Tribune Almanac for 1886 has made its appearance. This work has long had the reputation of a standard book of reference for political and statistical information. The Almanac for 1886 and 1885 had an unusual sale; and as it is stated that considerable pains have been taken to present in the Almanac for 1886 a complete and accurate statement of the gold and silver coinage from the beginning of the government, and the production of those metals, as also President Cleveland's inaugural address, the new issue will be in demand also. In addition to elaborate election tables, the Almanac gives summaries of all the important laws passed at the last session of congress, statistics of all the operations of the government, and lists of all the chief officers at Washington, and of the new congress, together with a large variety of other general information. There is an official statement of the new postage rates, among other things. Price, 30 cents a copy.

A report was published a few days ago to the effect that Governor Risk and Senator Sawyer had held a conference in Milwaukee last week, and had decided on the next political "slate," that Sawyer was to be elected, and that Risk Timme and Graham were to be re-nominated, and the rest of the present state ticket would have to take their chances. A dispatch from Madison to the Milwaukee Sentinel says that Governor Risk was interviewed on the subject and said: "The report is untrue in every particular. I met Senator Sawyer at Congressman Rankin's funeral, and returned to Milwaukee on the same train with him, but had no talk of a political nature. The matter of United States senator or of the next state ticket was not mentioned."

The Hon. S. S. Vaughan, one of the pioneers of Ashland, died on Friday. He came from Michigan to Wisconsin (settling at La Pointe) in 1822, where he was engaged as an Indian trader. Thence he moved to Bayfield, in 1856, and engaged in the merchandise and lumber business until 1873, when he transferred his business and residence to Ashland. He represented the northwest district in the state assembly in 1871, and was postmaster at Bayfield for many years. Since removing to Ashland he had been up to the time of his death prominently identified with its rapidly growing interests, and was among the most active promoters of development in the Gogebic iron range, where he held large interests.

If a democrat is to be elected to congress in the Fifth district to fill the place made vacant by the death of Mr. Rankin, let it be Senator Hudd, of Green Bay. He is a gentleman of fine abilities, of unimpeachable integrity, and his nomination and election would be a credit to the democracy and the state.

Mr. Thomas Nutt, in the current number of Harper's Weekly, has a cartoon which illustrates the statement that city newspaper reporters are more afflicted with hydrophobia than dogs. In some instances this is true.

The Sherman-Fry controversy is another proof among many thousands of others that it is dangerous for a public man to write letters which he would not want to see in print.

Senator Sherman's silver plan seems to have drawn out music by the entire band. But the harmony is not one of the features of the music.

General Logan has struck another popular idea. He does not want any more secret sessions of the senate.

Strange Vicissitudes of a Family Which Might Have Been Rolling in Wealth—Heirs to Ten Millions in the Poor-House—Big Contingent Fee.

AMERICA, Allegany County, N. Y., Feb. 1.—John Eudy and his sister Sarah have been inmates of the Allegany County poor house, in this village, for a quarter of a century. For a number of years the former has been periodically insane, and the latter is an idiot. During the past few weeks they have been the objects of much interest on account of their rich inheritance, which has changed their condition from pauperism to wealth, and revealed a chain of events which make up a very romantic story. The facts are as follows:

On Dec. 16, last, there was recorded in Erie, Pa., the will of Lorenzo Eudy, by the provisions of which an inheritance valued at $10,000,000 is to be distributed to the heirs. In Saxony there is an estate of a baron, comprising 500 or 600 acres, which, in the sixteenth century, descended to John Eudy in the line of natural succession. He had born to him three sons and four daughters, all of whom came to America and settled in Leyden, Franklin county, Mass. John, the eldest of these sons, married and had a family of three sons and three daughters. The sons were named Lorenzo, John, and William. The oldest daughter married Gardner Wells, the founder of Wellsboro, N. Y. Mary died in May, 1871, and William and Albert can not be found. John and Sarah are in the county house at this place, and Lorenzo died at G. F. Butler's, Poland Creek, N. Y., Oct. 27, 1885. A curious pocketbook, bearing the imprint of the Saxony coat of arms, containing a letter and his father's will, was found among his things. This letter documented and narrated the history of the family, and was bequeathed to each of his sons $100,000 in bonds and mortgages bearing 5 per cent interest, to go to them after his death, and in case the father survived them to descend in like manner to the eldest male child. The letter requested John to show the letter to each of his brothers. He complied with the request, walking the entire distance.

The history of the Eudys since their settlement in America is that of a band of aimless wanderers. When a local tract of land was purchased for the Indian reservation in the western part of New York the family were living near Torrancia, within the limits of the reservation, and were compelled to move to Danville. All their household effects were piled on a wagon. A high wind was blowing that day, and one of the boxes, containing several papers, was blown to the ground and broken. The papers were scattered to the wind, and many of them lost. After remaining in Danville for a time the family removed to Whitney Valley. While living there an advertisement in a religious paper making inquiries for the whereabouts of John Eudy attracted their attention. They commenced search for the will, but were unable to find it, and concluded that it had been lost while arriving from the Indian reservation to Danville.

The parents finally died at Canandaigua, this county, where they had again moved, and Lorenzo came into possession of his father's books and papers. He continued to rove in various parts of the United States, until he finally settled in Corry, Pa. During his residence there, while looking through some of the papers left him by his father, he accidentally discovered the old Saxony pocketbook containing the will of his grandfather. This was on the first Sunday of December, 1883, and on the following day he went to Erie, where he engaged a German lawyer on a contingent fee to recover the estate. The attorney was to go to Germany, pay his own expenses, and if successful, receive 5 per cent of the amount inherited. Corryspatience was opened with the proper parties in Germany, and the attorney learned that the will was properly recovered. He notified Lorenzo, and on April 8 visited him at Corry, telling him that he was to recover the estate. Lorenzo died from the effects of a paralytic stroke at Poland Center, near Jamestown, N. Y., Oct. 10, 1885. He left the original will, and also a letter from the attorney, which was given to the lawyer, who had a settlement in full for the share of Lorenzo, which amounted to $9,700,000, and that if the heirs to the other estates could not show as good a title as Lorenzo had shown, he would give them the total, being three times greater than Lorenzo's share. The lawyer made a good thing of it, his fee being nearly $400,000.

Hydrophobia in Wisconsin. MADISON, Wis., Feb. 1.—State Veterinary Aidman presented his report on hydrophobia to the board of health Friday. The doctor cites the several cases that have occurred in this city as follows: Joseph Turp, aged 9 years, bitten Nov. 11, died Dec. 10; George Tuschensmidt, bitten about the same time, died Nov. 28; in December a man named Kruse was bitten, showed symptoms of hydrophobia and died; an aged lady named Lucht died Jan. 4; what is supposed to have been hydrophobia, a farmer named Hill, of Manitowish, died from the effects of a dog bite Dec. 1; his son, who was also bitten, has as yet shown no symptoms of the disease. The doctor thinks that all danger has passed.

A Sensational Life Nailed. NEW YORK, Feb. 1.—A rumor was spread in this city Sunday night that Mr. Purnell had been assassinated in London Sunday afternoon. The report created considerable excitement and the different news agencies and cable offices were besieged by anxious newspaper correspondents in quest of further information. A request to verify the truth of the rumor was cabled to London and late at night a reply was received that the story was wholly unfounded and that Mr. Purnell was well and happy. The rumor is thought to have originated in Boston.

Death of an Old Estate. NEW HAVEN, Conn., Feb. 1.—Benjamin R. Hitchcock, who died in this city Sunday morning, was one of the founders of The Palladium and The Journal and Courier. He was born in Bethel, Conn., in 1805, removing to New Haven in 1832. Until eighteen months ago he followed the trade of a journeyman printer and was said to have been the oldest type-setter in the United States. DRINK AND DEVILTRY

GO HAND IN HAND TO A FEAST OF BLOOD.

Atrocious Murder of Two Women by a Worthless Cleveland Miscreant, Who Attempts One Desperate Consumption by Cutting His Own Cord of Throat.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Feb. 1.—One of the bloodiest tragedies ever perpetrated in this city, horrible in detail, encompassing the death of two and probably of the murderer, was discovered Sunday morning in a room in the Crocker block, opposite the City block. The murderer and probable suicide was Alfred Smith, a profligate fellow who has been in trouble for some time, and who, it is said, was a drunkard and a gambler. Mrs. Smith, a clairvoyant and a companion, Mrs. Lucia Jane Wilson, who had but recently come to live at the Smith rooms. Mrs. Smith has lived for some time past in a constant dread of her husband, who abused her at every opportunity that presented and made her life almost unbearable by his constant sneers. Last Thursday, resolved to bear his abuse no longer, she applied for a divorce, which came on Tuesday to her and endeavored to effect some sort of a compromise, but she refused to listen to his entreaties.

Smith and his wife have two children aged 10 and 12, a boy and girl. A few days ago owing to the trouble existing in the family Mrs. Smith thought best to send the children to the west and south sides. Saturday evening Smith returned to the rooms partially intoxicated, but left after staying a short time. As he went out the two defenseless women bolted the door to prevent his return but about 10 o'clock, it is supposed, he forced entrance through the window. The women greeted his entrance with cries of fright and fled to an adjoining room where he followed and leaped curses and imprecations upon their heads until he became so enraged that he was unable to utter a word to quiet the row. After the policeman retired all remained quiet throughout the night. About 8:30 Sunday morning Mrs. Hattie Wright, the janitor of the building, went down to the Smith room and knocked repeatedly, and attempted to force the door. Hearing groans inside, she called out, "What is the matter?" but receiving no reply secured a key, unlocked the door and looked over the transoms and saw blood. She called her husband, who summoned others in the block, and they found Patrickman Wood, who broke into the room. They discovered the bodies of the two women lying on the bed. They picked up Smith's body, lying between the two women on the bed, and carried it to the next room. It was still warm, and medical aid was summoned.

It is supposed the murder was committed in the morning. Smith, who had been sleeping in an adjoining room, rose from his bed, and going into the sleeping apartment of the woman, dragged his wife from the bed and pounded the half-awake woman on the head. She resisted all struggles, eventually to free herself, but the assailant thrust her again and she fell to the floor. Mrs. Wilson was probably awakened during the struggle, and to add to the fearful evidences of his ferocity, the bloody butcher seized her, and raising the hammer aloft, brought it down with terrific force on her head. She probably put up her hand to ward off the blow, for the set was broken from her ring. Her husband, who had been lying on the bed, saw his wife being thus treated, and he rushed to her aid, but he was unable to do so, for he had fallen to the floor. Picking up the bodies he placed both on the bed, as they were afterwards found, and went into the adjoining room. In there he seized a razor and drew it across his throat. With the blood streaming from the gash he returned to the scene of his atrocities and threw himself between the bloody bodies with his arms across his wife.

Coroner West arrived on the scene about 11 o'clock and proceeded to make an examination of the wounds of the women. The mortal lacerations of Mrs. Smith's head were broken in two places, the right parietal bone fractured and the fragments driven into the brain. The frontal bone in Mrs. Wilson's head was broken, the left frontal bone and the nasal bone broken. Part of her brain was scattered on the bed. Both the man and wife originally came from Oswego, N. Y., where they had spent their childhood and were married in 1870. Late in 1870 they came to Cleveland. Late in 1870 they came to Cleveland. Late in 1870 they came to Cleveland.

Smith was seen by a reporter at the H. on Street house. He is very reticent, and will not talk about his terrible deed. His injuries are not considered serious, and it is thought that he will recover.

A Novel Feature in Investments. THE whole country, after having undergone a period of depression is now seeking itself, what business has least been affected and uninjured?

Such a business, industry or corporation that can make a better showing now than before the crisis, attract the attention of capital, merits the confidence of investors, and is being eagerly sought for.

Y.

CLEVELAND'S COMPLAINT.

SOME REMARKS THE PRESIDENT IS SAID TO HAVE MADE.

His Understanding of Civil Service Reform—He Means to Reform His Judges and Deputies, Dismiss Senators, Repeal—Bayard's Second Allusion.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 1.—The action of the Democratic senators, taken in the subject of Cleveland's complaint, Saturday night. One or two senators have not been supposed to be in accord with the president, and it has been hinted that Cleveland's complaint might be a prelude to the project of bringing the president to a realization of the importance of the senate. There can be no question, however, that the Democrats have secured the assistance in their power. The caucus unanimously passed a resolution as follows:

"Resolved, That we approve the views and action of the president, communicated to the senate through the attorney general, in his letter of Jan. 29, 1895, and that we cordially support the executive therein."
The senators also considered the proposition made by Senator Platt to discuss the nominations in dispute in open session. No definite action was taken in relation thereto, but it is understood in case a majority of Republicans express themselves in favor of the proposition the Democrats will permit the resolution to be voted down. Some of the Democratic leaders think the whole matter will end in smoke. The argument is made that the session has up to time been uninteresting and unimportant. In the course of a week or so, such a matter the house will probably have before it legislation of a political nature, and the actions of the senate will be but a side issue.

The Boston Herald's correspondent quotes the president as saying:

"I have tried to be true to my own pledges and the pledges of my party. No both promised to direct the office of the country from being used for party purposes. I have held to my promise, and I mean to hold to it."
He did not propose to hold party service in the case of the president against a man. On the contrary, it gave him a strong, equitable claim to office. He had been excluded for twenty-four years because he was a Democrat. He should have been removed for party reasons, and not for political reasons. I think the Republican senators should be just enough to believe this of me. They ought to appreciate that I am trying to do my duty. Why they should continue to distrust me I do not see. They do not come to me, either personally or by committee, to get an understanding of my attitude or to obtain explanations on points of action to which they object. They stand off and question the sincerity of my purposes."

BAYARD BEREAVED AGAIN.

Death Lays His Hand Once More on the Secretary's Home—Mrs. Bayard Dead.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 1.—Mrs. Louisa Leve Bayard, wife of the secretary of the treasury, died at her residence at 8:30 o'clock Sunday morning of congestion of the brain. This is the second time within the brief space of two years that death has visited the household of the secretary.

Mrs. Bayard has been in feeble health for several years, and the death of her husband two weeks ago completely prostrated her, from which prostration she never rallied. Late Saturday night her physical condition was so bad that death was imminent, and so the public here in a measure prepared for the sad news. Mrs. Bayard's remains will be taken to Wilmington, Delaware, to attend the funeral. Expressions of condolence are heard on all sides for the secretary in his great affliction. Political and personal friends, and men whose intercourse with him was limited to the office, are here in their regret for the sorrowful event which has crowded upon him during the past two weeks. The president, cabinet officers, members of foreign legations, senators and members of the house of representatives called at the secretary's home or sent messages of condolence to him. The president has recalled his invitations for the dinner to the supreme court, which was announced for Saturday night, and has postponed the social events which were to have taken place this week have been postponed.

—County Treasurer Willis Miles to-day paid the sum of $27,777.51, into the state treasury, being the amount of state tax, and suit tax and fines due from Rock county. He also received to-day from the state the sum of $5,003.61 due the county for the care of insane.

—Last night the seven year old son of Mr. and Mrs. John Flaberty, of the second ward, fell a victim to scarlet fever after a short illness. Owing to the nature of the disease, the funeral, which was held this afternoon at three o'clock, was private, and the remains of the little sufferer were placed in the cold grave unattended save by the stricken parents and a few very intimate friends.

—Saturday February 6th there will be a five mile race at the rink between Robert H. Ehlert, champion of Illinois, and John L. Alexander, champion of Indiana and Minnesota. Both are very rapid skaters and have been anxious to meet each other for a long time. The fact of Mr. Ehlert being a member of our polo team makes this race of particular interest here.

To-day the grocery store of Ball & Bates has been thronged with people who are interested in seeing what can be done with the purest and best baking powder in the market. To-morrow the exhibition will be continued at the store of Mr. I. C. Brownell. Everybody invited.

—Ireland's wrongs were thoroughly discussed yesterday afternoon at the meeting of the O'Connell club in the ladies' armory. A very large audience was present and the programme was unusually interesting. The meeting was addressed by the Rev. Father McGinnity of this city, the Rev. Father Ward, of Beloit and the Rev. —The following, from the Dover, (New Hampshire) Republican, is respectfully referred to the Business Men's Association:—"We understand that the agents of the great Singer sewing machine establishment, now located in New Jersey, have made application to Dover to see what inducements the city will offer to have them move here and set up their works. They employ 3,500 workmen, most of them experts in the business. They would require about five miles of railroad around their establishment, and it would be necessary to build some 300 or 400 houses to accommodate their employees. Let Dover do all it can to induce them to come here. Make no delay."

—On Saturday afternoon a party of young gentlemen, students at Beloit college, indulged in a little sleigh-ride to this city. The party consisted of Messrs. C. O. Russell, W. H. Rogers, C. I. Follett, F. F. Norcross, C. W. Whitehead, J. V. Norcross, W. B. Montague, E. B. —Chicago Inter Ocean:—Every year every local paper gives from one hundred to two thousand lines for the sole benefit of the vicinity in which it is published. No other agency can or will do this. The local editor, according to his means, and in all fairness man with man does more for his town than ten men, and he ought to be supported, not because you may admire his writing, but because a local paper is the best investment a community can make. It may not be brilliant or crowded with great thought, but financially it is of more benefit than the preacher or the teacher. Understand us now, we don't mean intellectually or morally, and yet on moral questions you will find the majority of the local papers on the right side of the question. To-day the editors of the local papers do the most work for the least money of any class of men on earth, and irrespective of party affiliation every business man should support his local paper and not as an act of charity but as a financial investment.

—Last evening Constable John Ryan, of the fourth ward, and Mr. P. Connors met and commenced a discussion concerning the poor people of our city. The discussion turned upon the amount each should give for the support of the poor, when one remarked that he would give dollar for dollar with the other, at the same time placing five dollars in Marshal Hogan's hands. Constable Ryan put up five, and as the sportsman would say, went five better. This brought Mr. Connors up again, he raising the sum five dollars, and the two gentlemen continued the "discussion" in this manner until Marshal Hogan, who had been designated the custodian of the money, had received the handsome sum of one hundred and thirty dollars. At this point each introduced the marshal to distribute the money among the most needy of the city poor, shook hands and separated for the evening. This is a very generous donation on the part of Constable Ryan and Mr. Connors, and one for which they will receive many thanks and "God bless you," as the marshal distributes the money to the needy. A few more people with a corresponding liberality would be a blessing to the poor.

THE BIBLE READING.

In the morning the pastor, Rev. M. G. Dodge, D. D., preached his sermon, being as usual, a very able one. In the evening a union service was held, the Congregationalists, Presbyterians and Baptists meeting in the church of the latter society. The meeting was very well attended and was somewhat of a revivalistic nature.

A selection from the book of Luke was read by the Rev. A. J. Van Wagner, and after singing he also offered a brief prayer. The subject for the reading was "Jacob and Esau." We study this evening two characters, the difference in whose dispositions is the more marked because they were those of brothers—Esau was of a roving disposition, while Jacob was not. The sale of Esau's birthright for a mess of pottage and the value of a birthright in those days was explained. This action of Esau's showed him to be reckless, impulsive and impatient, while Jacob was crafty, designing and selfish. Jacob's scheming to secure his father's blessing furnished another proof of his craftiness, while Esau showed grand characteristics and noble nature. Jacob's conversion at the time of his vision changed all this, however, and he became a new man. This was plainly shown in the verses read. Jacob did not become a perfect man, for conversion never makes one perfect, but he was put on the right track. After that he relied upon the Lord and when he learned that Esau was advancing with four hundred armed men he fully believed that God would help him. He became more powerful and beloved because of his trust; while Esau, who possessed a nature so much superior, drops out of history as the leader of a roving band of Abenacians he did not have that trust. So it is now. We may have many qualifications, but we are very unlikely to succeed unless we rely on one higher than ourselves. At the close of Mr. Stuey's remarks the Rev. W. F. Brown arose and spoke for a few minutes on the same subject. An invitation was given to all those interested to remain for an after meeting and many of the audience did so. The service awakened unusual interest, and while considerably different from those during the past two weeks, was evidently productive of much good.
